find the most fade resistant, durable colors

FLORIDA PAINTS

Paint a Brighter Day

Color Performance Guide

The Florida Paints Color Performance Guide evaluates the 1,320 colors in our fandeck for fade resistance by including with each color:

- the percent of organic colorant used in the tint formula
- the ounces of colorant used in the tint formula
- the light reflectance value
- the fade rating of the color

All of these factors play a key role in overall color durability. Also, it is important that you use this guide along with a Florida Paint's fandeck as the color samples displayed in this guide are printed using four ink colors, and will not accurately represent the true paint color. Once you spend some time studying the guide, we hope you will better understand how colors are "built" and be able to select the perfect, yet most durable colors to meet your project needs.

Points to Consider when Choosing Colors

- Architectural paints are manufactured in white or clear bases, then tinted using machine colorants to achieve a desired color.
- Colors are created with a tint formula, which is the process of blending different amounts of different colorants and mixing them into the product line's appropriate tint base.
- Regardless of the brand, all paint manufacturers are challenged to create tint formulas that are durable, especially with bright, deep, or vibrant colors.
- There are two basic types of colorant: organic (derived from living matter) and inorganic (compounds not containing carbon.)
- Bright, vibrant colors are less durable and fade the most because they contain primarily organic colorants.
- Earth-toned colors are more durable and fade the least because they contain primarily inorganic colorants.
- The more colorant required to create a color, the more likely it is to fade.

In areas where fade resistance is a top priority, consult with a Florida Paints representative. We offer certain types of paint products and systems which can extend the life of fade prone colors.

Color Tinting

Color retention and overall durability in architectural paints can be complex. When bright, deep, or vibrant colors are chosen all paint manufacturers are challenged to find formulations that will endure, regardless of the brand.

Below are the colorants we use in our architectural products. They have been rated for their lightfastness in southern exposure (lightfastness is a property of a colorant that describes how resistant to fading it is when exposed to light). This value is assigned a number from one to five.

Organic Colorants

Inorganic Colorants

Lightfastness Rating (1-excellent, 2-very good, 3-fair, 4-poor, 5-very poor) based on modified ASTM D4303

This graphic lists the colorants we use in our architectural products, with organics on the top and inorganics on the bottom. We have also rated these colorants for their fade resistance in southern exposure with a fade rating of value of one being very fade resistant and five being very prone to fading.

As you will see, the earth tone colorants rate very well, while the bright, vibrant colors rate very poorly. To avoid fading try not to select bright, vibrant colors which use a high amount of organic colorant.

We strive to develop exterior paint tint formulas using as little organic colorant as we can, but sometimes that's not an option. There are many colors which contain pure organic colorants in large quantities, and there just aren't many options available towards leaving these colorants out of the tint formula.

How to Use This Guide

At Florida Paints, we place a high priority on color retention and durability. That's why we created this guide to help you gain a better understanding of the colors that perform the best in Florida's sun-soaked, hot, humid, severe climate. The key below will help you decipher the performance value our colors.

- LRV: The light reflectance value, which measures the amount of visible and usable light that reflects from (or absorbs into) a painted surface. Simply put, LRV measures the percentage of light a paint color reflects. Higher value colors will keep the surface cooler while lower values will make the surface hotter and reduce the life of the paint film.
- Tint Ozs: The number of ounces of colorant used to create the color. The lower the number of ounces the more durable the product (more paint, less colorant.)
- Pct Org: The percent of organic colorant used in the tint formula. The lower the value, the more durable the color as inorganic colorants are the most durable.
- Fade Rtg: A value from 1 to 10 which predicts the propensity of a color to fade. The greater the value the more likely it is to fade.
- FD Page: The Florida Paints fandeck page number for the color displayed.
